

Code of Professional Ethics for the Faculty

1. Professors endeavor not only to educate students in their fields of specialty, but also to cultivate their character. They devote their efforts to producing students of distinguished talent who will contribute to the prosperity of society at large.
2. As expert researchers, professors strive to promote advanced scholarship and create knowledge and skills essential to the development of human society.
3. Professors share their expert knowledge and new research results with society to contribute to the promotion of public welfare and prosperity.
4. Professors respect students on equal terms as fellow human beings and respect their rights as individuals. They make every effort to protect their students' human rights.
5. Professors have the right and obligation to participate in the organization and administration of the university community.